METHODISTS

The Methodist Church, founded by John Wesley, split from the Church of England in 1795. This parent church of Wesleyan Methodists itself divided into a number of separate movements with the Independent Methodists being founded in 1796 and the Methodist New Connexion in 1797. In 1811 the Primitive Methodist Connexion left the Wesleyan Methodists and in 1815 the Bible Christian Church was founded. Finally, in 1857 the United Methodist Free Church was formed from a number of smaller breakaway movements.

The Methodist New Connexion, Bible Christians and United Methodist Free Churches united in 1907 to form the United Methodist Church. In 1932 this branch joined together with the Wesleyan Church and the Primitive Methodist Church to form the present-day Methodist Church. Smaller movements like the Independent Methodists and Wesleyan Reform Union still remain.

Most pre-1837 nonconformist registers were deposited at the National Archives, Kew, and are therefore available at Sheffield Archives on microfilm only. Most of these have been indexed on the International Genealogical Index, are available on microfiche, or online at www.familysearch.org .

INDEPENDENT, CONGREGATIONAL and UNITED REFORMED CHURCH

Formerly known as Independents, the Congregational Church only became a united denomination in the middle of the nineteenth century, when the loosely federated Independent Chapels joined together. In 1972 a majority of the Congregational churches of England and Wales united with the Presbyterian Church to form the United Reformed Church. There is a separate list for the United Reformed Church records.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS (QUAKERS)

During the 17th century small groups of radical Protestant separatists came together under the leadership of George Fox to form a religious body called the Children of Light or Friends of the Truth. This movement, which spread from the north of England during the 1640s and reached London and the south by 1655, soon became known as the Society of Friends or the Quakers. Meetings were held at four levels: preparative, monthly, quarterly and yearly. Monthly meetings for the Sheffield area were held at Balby, Doncaster.

Registers of births (not baptisms), marriages and burials began to be kept in the late 1650s, usually at Monthly Meetings, but they have not always survived. Declarations of intentions of marriage were also made at Monthly Meetings and are often recorded in minute books.

The searchroom list of Quaker records should always be consulted before ordering the QR material listed below. Some of the references are to indexes only and do not provide any details of events. Many of the records are counterfoils or notes of certificates. For fuller details, e.g. dates of marriages etc, the minute books themselves should be requested where this is possible.
