Introduction

This booklet lists sources available within Sheffield Libraries Archives and Information for the study of the Sheffield Blitz of 1940.

It is not a detailed history of the topic; it merely points the reader who wishes to carry out their own research to what is available within Sheffield Libraries and Archives.

Sheffield was a major supplier to the British arms industry, not only in the Second World War but also in the Great War of 1914 - 1918. Being such an important industrial city it was considered to be a target by the Germans.

The main attacks on Sheffield took place on the nights of 12/13th and 15/16th December 1940.

On 12th December over 330 German aircraft are believed to have attacked the city. The main industrial part of the city was largely defended that night by a covering of fog. Areas that were hit included Norton Lees, Gleadless, Abbeydale, Brincliffe Edge, Moorhead, Glossop Road, Park Hill, Millhouses, Sharrow, Broomhill, Crookesmoore, Walkley, Owlerton, Burngreave, Meersbrook, Wybourn and Neepsend.

The Moor was devastated, whilst every building in Angel Street (where Argos is now) was bombed or fire damaged. King Street was also badly hit. 106 out of a total of 154 of the city's schools were damaged, with 8 being completely destroyed.

Two nights later the bombers returned. This time the industrial east of the city was hit - Attercliffe, Grimesthorpe and Burngreave in particular. Brown Bayleys steelworks were hit, as were Hadfield's Hecla and East Hecla Works, Arthur Lee and other industrial sites.

Almost 700 people were killed during the air raids. Over 82,000 houses of a total stock of 150,000 were damaged. Well known buildings that were badly damaged or destroyed included the Kings Head Hotel, Atkinson's Department Store, C & A Modes, St Mark's church, St Vincent's Roman Catholic church, the Central Hebrew Synagogue and Sheffield United Football Club's Bramall Lane ground.

13 Dec 1940 10.00am	Rescue attempts on Marples Hotel began in earnest.
15 Dec 1940	The blitz continued. 90 enemy aircraft attacked the city.
May 1945	Germany surrendered. The war ended in Europe.

In the Line of Fire

Sheffield was a major supplier to the British arms industry, not only in the Second World War but also in the Great War of 1914 - 1918. Being such an important industrial city it was considered to be a target by the Germans.

In early September 1939, under the shadow of expected heavy bomb attacks, plans to evacuate the city's children were put into effect. 20 special trains took 155 groups of Sheffield children to the relative safety of Lincolnshire. Many went in school groups, for example 300 children from Abbeydale school were evacuated together.

In October, with no air attacks on Sheffield forthcoming, a few evacuees drifted back home thinking they may be just as safe as in the countryside.

School log books for the new term in September 1939 may give useful references to evacuation measures.

Sheffield's Defences

To protect citizens a whole range of measures were put in place.

58 public buildings were modified for use as public shelters, an additional 294 shelters were provided by shops, pubs and banks, etc. A few purpose built shelters were also provided as well as individual homes being issued with Anderson and Morrison shelters.

The city had over 70 balloons making up its defence barrage.

Anti-aircraft gun emplacement on Warminster Road (Sheffield Local Studies Library: Picture Sheffield s03553)

Barrage balloons were large balloons tethered to the ground using metal cables. They were designed to either cause low flying bombers to fly into them and crash or to force the enemy aircraft up higher to avoid them thus making it more difficult for the pilots to see their targets.

There were also anti-aircraft guns, including heavy types at Shirecliffe, Manor and Brinsworth as well as powerful search lights.

Other defences included mock steel furnaces and mock tram sparks. These were lit in remote unpopulated areas in attempts to draw enemy aircraft away.

Rocket batteries (artillery) were not put into widespread use until 1942, after the threat to Sheffield had passed.

Bomb Damage

The main attacks on Sheffield took place on the nights of 12/13th and 15/16th December 1940.

On 12th December over 330 German aircraft are believed to have attacked the city, dropping 355 tonnes of high explosives and over 16,000 incendiary canisters. The take-cover warning was sounded at 7.00pm, with the most intense period of bombing being between 10.30 pm and 2.15 am. It wasn't until 4.15 am that the all clear was sounded.

The main industrial part of the city was largely defended that night by a covering of fog. Areas that were hit included Norton Lees, Gleadless, Abbeydale, Brincliffe Edge, Moorhead, Glossop Road, Park Hill, King Street was also badly hit.

Millhouses, Sharrow, Broomhill, Crookesmoore, Walkley, Owlerton, Burngreave, Meersbrook, Wybourn and Neepsend.

Nether Edge and Jessops Hospital for Women received direct hits. 106 out of a total of 154 city schools were damaged, with 8 being completely destroyed.

Two nights later the bombers returned. Almost 100 planes attacked the city for just over 3 hours from 6.50pm to 10.05 pm. This time the industrial east of the city was hit -Attercliffe, Grimesthorpe and Burngreave in particular. Brown Bayleys steelworks were hit, as were Hadfield's Hecla and East Hecla Works, Arthur Lee and other industrial sites.

Almost 700 people were killed. 134 were buried in a mass grave at the City Road Cemetery, now the site of a memorial garden.

Over 82,000 houses of a total stock of 150,000 were damaged, almost 3,000 beyond repair.

Well known buildings that were badly damaged or destroyed included the Kings Head Hotel, Angel Hotel, Atkinson's Department Store, C & A Modes, St Mark's church, St Vincent's Roman Catholic church, the Central Hebrew Synagogue, Sheffield United Football Club's Bramall Lane ground and the Athenaeum Club, etc.

Marples Hotel

The single biggest loss of life occurred at the Marples Hotel in the city centre when 70 men, women and children were trapped inside the cellars following a direct hit on the building above.

The Marples Hotel on the corner of Fitzalan Square and High Street was a well known building. More of a public house, than what we know as a hotel, its formal name was Wine and Spirit Commercial Hotel, but it was popularly known as the Marples.

A large building of 7 storeys, it was being used on the night of 12th December as a makeshift bomb shelter. Over 70 citizens took shelter there as the Germans rained down bombs on the city. Tragically, at 11.44 pm the building received a direct hit from a high explosive bomb and all 7 storeys collapsed down onto the cellars. The cellars gave way trapping all those inside.

Trade Directories

Trade directories were published every few years. They list trades and businesses as well as some residents (arranged street by street) (they are often described as the forerunner of telephone directories). A comparison of a pre-war directory (such as Kelly's Directory of Sheffield for 1934) with a post-war edition (such as 1948) will reveal gaps in the listings for bomb damaged areas.

Business and Industry

Sheffield City Archives has an extensive collection of business archives. A search of director's minutes and production records may reveal the impact (or otherwise) of the blitz. Company magazines, mainly at Local Studies, can also reveal useful references. For details of business material you will need to check the computer catalogues and card indexes at both City Archives and Local Studies.
